DESCRIPTION:

The COPES provides for comprehensive measurement of those personal values which have been demonstrated to reflect those major dimensions representing the vocational motivation or value domain.

USES:

The COPES is designed for use in career exploration courses to measure the values component of the self-awareness curriculum. In the industrial or educational counseling situation where there is a focus in improving self-awareness, the COPES provides a useful supplement to other sources of information used to compose a well-rounded picture of the clients' personal characteristics.

VALIDITY:

Evidence for validity of the COPES is presented in terms of the internal structure of the Inventory and the relationship of dimensions measured to outside criteria.

SCALES:

INVESTIGATIVE vs. ACCEPTING - Intellectual curiosity and seeking the challenge of solving a complex task represent values of persons scoring high on this dimension.

PRACTICAL vs. CAREFREE - Showing proper appreciation for one's possessions and the importance of practicality and efficiency represent values of persons scoring high on this dimension.

INDEPENDENCE vs. CONFORMITY - Independence from rules, regulations and social conventions and the freedom to work independently represent values of persons scoring high on this dimension.

LEADERSHIP vs. SUPPORTIVE - Making decisions, directing others and speaking for the group represent values of persons scoring high on this dimension.

ORDERLINESS vs. FLEXIBILITY - Doing what is expected, being orderly and keeping things neat and tidy and in their proper place are major values of persons scoring high on this dimension.

RECOGNITION vs. PRIVACY - To become well-known and famous and to associate with influential persons represent values of persons scoring high on this dimension.

AESTHETIC vs. REALISTIC - Artistic appreciation and sensitivity; the enjoyment of music and the arts represent values of persons scoring high on this dimension.
